
Peace on Earth... Goodwill to Men

Throughout the distant reaches of the Christian world, worshipers rejoice in the glorious rebirth of hope and faith as the celebration of the Birth of Our Savior begins. In Appomattox, the town that brought peace to a troubled America, may this spiritual communion, inspired by the true meaning of Christmas, prevail everlastingly and guide us to peace through sharing love, compassion and understanding with our fellow man.

Eating Well

DON'T POISON YOUR HOLIDAY GUEST

Nothing dispels the cheer of a holiday like a sudden upset stomach brought on by contaminated food.

Preventing food poisoning should start when you buy food at the supermarket and continue as you store, cook, and serve the food. The job of preventing food poisoning isn't hard if you follow three simple rules: keep food clean, keep food hot, keep food cold.

Keep food clean. You can keep germs off meat, poultry and dairy products by washing your hands thoroughly before handling the food and by using utensils instead of hands whenever possible. Do not handle food when you have open cuts and sores, because the germs from the cuts may get into the food. If you cut raw meat on a cutting board, make sure that you clean it thoroughly before using the board again. Don't cut uncooked meats and then use the same knife to cut other foods; germs can spread from one food to another.

Keep food hot. We know that most germs that cause food poisoning are killed when boiled, broiled, or roasted. Once food is cooked, keep it hot until it is served. If you want to cook foods and then keep them for later use, don't allow them to stand around, but refrigerate them immediately. Remember that food left at room temperature for more than two hours allows germs to grow, and that these seldom change the taste, odor or looks of food.

In order to prevent contamination when preparing poultry products, stuff the bird just before cooking rather than a day or two ahead. When storing leftovers, remove the stuffing and place it in a separate dish; then remove the meat from the bone immediately and place both in the refrigerator.

Both broth and gravy are especially subject to spoilage. Do not leave leftovers on the stove to cool; be sure to cool leftovers quickly by putting them into the refrigerator. When you want to serve them again, reheat and boil for several minutes before serving.

Cream pies are often involved in food poisoning. Since cream pies and cream-filled pastries get soggy when refrigerated too long, it is a temptation to leave them at room temperature. Don't, because it encourages bacteria to grow. Be sure to fill the pastries as close to serving time as possible.

Keep foods cold. Germs can't multiply fast if the storage temperature is 40 degrees F. or below. Therefore, when you go to the grocery store always pick up meat, poultry and dairy products last and then get them home and into your refrigerator or freezer quickly. If these foods get warm you may have problems from both food poisoning and spoilage, so make the grocery store the last stop before going home, and never leave the groceries in a hot car.

There are several ways to thaw frozen foods. The best way is to put the wrapped food in the refrigerator and allow it to thaw completely. However, this takes time; so if you are in a hurry, put the food in a watertight package and run cool water over it.

Very often the odor of a food or appearance may indicate that something is wrong; however, most of the time it is difficult to know when food has "gone bad." There are two good rules to follow when working with foods: never taste any food that doesn't seem right and if in doubt, throw it out.

Hollywood

God gave a priceless gift to the world that first Christmas in person of His own son! May His love enrich our hearts at this Holy time. The message of Christmas never grows old, for it is a beautiful story of God's son, our Savior. At this Christmas season may our hearts overflow with the feeling of wonder and hope that His coming brought.

Everyone enjoyed the Christmas program entitled "The Light of the World" Sunday evening at Hollywood. The social hour afterwards was enjoyed by all also. We appreciate so much the wonderful way the program and social committees and the youth of our church handled everything.

We were sorry to hear of the illness of Mr. Robert Coleman. He was a patient in the Lynchburg General Hospital several days last week. We are so glad he is at home. We pray he may have a very speedy recovery.

May the Prince of Peace, our Lord Jesus Christ, bless your homes with peace and love during this Christmas season throughout the New Year ahead is my wish for the staff of the Times-Virginian and all its readers.

Winterization Assistance

The Central Virginia Commission on Aging is seeking the elderly and or the handicapped on fixed incomes through-out the areas of Amherst and Appomattox, who are in need of winterization services in their homes.

The program provides the labor and materials at no charge to the client, but donations are accepted to offset the cost of supplies, if at all possible. Prevention of the infiltration of cold weather by insulating walls and ceilings, adding storm windows, weather stripping and making minor repairs to roofs and heating systems, are provided by the winterization program.

Eligibility is determined by the federal poverty levels which at this time for a single adult is $3,240 and $4,450 for a couple. If you think that you or someone you know is eligible contact our office or be referred by a fuel supplier, local organiation, or social services offices. We will make contact to determine eligibility and explain our program and purpose. If eligible we will then schedule the client for winterization services. This is done as quickly as possible. We are federally funded and locally matched. All donations are welcome and will further our efforts to ensure all eligible clients are served.

The Central Virginia Commission on Aging is anxious to serve the elderly and the handicapped.
